VALVE LAUNCHES STEAM GREENLIGHT

Press Release - Valve

30 Aug, 2012

Over 30 Titles Awaiting Community Feedback

August 30, 2012 -- Valve, creators of best-selling game franchises (such as Counter-Strike, Half-Life, Left 4 Dead, Portal, and Team Fortress) and leading technologies (such as Steam and Source), today announced the launch of Steam Greenlight, a new platform feature that enlists the community's help in selecting some of the next games to be released on Steam.

The 5 Myths of the Indiepocalypse

The following blog post, unless otherwise noted, was written by a member of Gamasutra's community. The thoughts and opinions expressed are those of the writer and not Gamasutra or its parent company.

The hot topic for independent developers these days is the so-called “indiepocalypse”. It’s the notion that indies are going to have an increasingly difficult time making a living now that mobile and Steam are both “flooded” with games. Indiepocalypse posts tend to focus on 5 key ideas:

1. There is too much competition, especially now that so many games launch on Steam each week.
2. Various charts are showing bad things, such as revenue per game declining.
3. The App Store is a wasteland. Steam will now become a wasteland.
4. A few high profile indie games have had weaker-than-expected launches lately. Surely this means that the apocalypse is upon us?
5. Triple-I independent games are going to force indie budgets to rise inexorably, mirroring what happened with AAA.

Over 500 games now submitted to iOS App Store every day

Have you ever wondered how many mobile games are submitted to the iOS App Store every month?

Well, you can find out the answer by paying a visit to PG.biz's iOS App Store Metrics page, which has been keeping tabs on that exact stat since the App Store opened.

Having so much data in one place makes it easy to see how the mobile industry has evolved over the past eight years. For example, when PG.biz first started tracking data in July 2008, they only recorded a paltry 258 games submissions for the entire month.

SteamSpy: $20 and $60 were the top-earning Steam game prices last year

SteamSpy operator and Epic employee Sergey Galyonkin published a Medium post today that's full of interesting stats gleaned from what his Steam surveillance platform saw in 2017.

Notably, Galyonkin reports that last year the most popular game price was $10, but the games that generated the most revenue on Steam were priced at $30 (25.56 percent of all revenue for the year) and $60 (18.49 percent of all revenue.)

However, it's important to note that PUBG Corp.'s PlayerUnknown's Battlegrounds dominated Steam last year, selling over 25 million copies and generating over $600 million in revenue, according to SteamSpy estimates. When Galyonkin removed PUBG from his dataset, the overall shape of the graph (reprinted below) remained the same but $20 became the top earner, accounting for 19.56 percent of total revenue for the year.

"Surprise: cheap games do not make a lot of money," wrote Galyonkin. "People are still mostly buying relatively expensive and quality titles."

The challenge is to stand out, and finding alternative sources of revenue.

Key takeaways

1. Find your target audience, and stick to it
2. Be open to pivot - have plans, but be ready to change them
3. Strive for a diverse portfolio
4. Don't plan a Magnum Opus and build a company just because you have to
5. If no-one in the team likes business, find a CEO/bizdev person
6. There are alternative ways of earning money, besides just making games
7. Keep your IP in mind
8. Find ways to be unique

Questions?

Workshop

steamspy
know your games

1. Head to SteamSpy.com
2. Look around in the database
3. Look for games that have done really well (1M+ sales)
 - a. When were they released?
 - b. What genres are they?
 - c. What tags have been applied?
 - d. What are the price points?
4. Draw your own conclusions - what works on Steam, and what does not?
